

94-104 Lafayette Street

ARCHITECTURAL LEGACY

Architectural Significance

A rare and exceptionally preserved example of early 20th-century commercial architecture, designed by two of New York's most celebrated architects with a Tribeca address.

Designed By

Howells & Stokes
— eminent
architects of their era

Built

1907–1908, over a century of enduring presence

Unique Distinction

The only known
store-and-loft building by Howells & Stokes

IDENTITY & HERITAGE

The Avildsen Building

Known historically as the Avildsen Building, this address carries a name synonymous with Tribeca's storied commercial past. More than a century after its construction, it remains a defining presence on Lafayette Street — a symbol of the neighborhood's transformation from industrial powerhouse to cultural and creative capital.

Fully renovated with a new lobby, new elevators, and full internet and T1 line infrastructure — the building's historic character meets modern-day operational excellence.

A rare opportunity to anchor your business in a building with genuine New York City history — a name and address that people remember.

Available Spaces Range Between

2,500 to 5,500 RSF

Make Your Mark at 94-104 Lafayette Street

This is a rare chance to establish your business in one of Manhattan's most iconic and historically significant buildings. Spaces of this caliber are exceptionally limited — don't miss the opportunity to claim your place in Tribeca's legacy. n

Schedule a Tour

Experience the space in person and envision your business at this landmark address.

